MISCELLANEOUS.

Is Life Worth Living?

That depends upon the Liver. If the Liver is inactive the whole system is out of order—the breath is bad, digestion poor, head dull or aching, energy and hopefulness gone, the spirit is depressed, a heavy weight exists after eating, with general despondency and the blues. The Liver is the housekeeper of the health; and a harmless, simple remedy that acts like Nature, does not constipate afterwards or require constant taking, does not interfere with business or pleasure during its use, makes Simmons Liver Regulator a medical perfection.

I have tested its virtues personally, and know that for Dyspepsia, Biliousness and Throbbing Headache, it is the best medicine the world ever saw. Have tried forty other remedies before Simmons Liver Regulator, and none of them gave more than temporary relief, but the Regulator not only relieved but cured.

F. MALANI.

Styles in Alaska.

It is strange how soon one becomes accustomed to and adopts the customs of the country in which one sojourns. All our party have gradually come to wear native clothing, more or less.

Sealskin boots (hair seal, not the fur seal), either with the hair on or off the uppers and legs, as may be desired, with walrus skin soles, worn with an insole of dry grass, were the first articles of apparel adopted. They are the most comfortable I have ever worn. They are also the most clumsy looking.

But one soon forgets about the appearance, and a person with a pair of American made leather boots or shoes looks as much out of place as an Eskimo would on the streets of Portland with his parka (coat) hood and boots on.

It is too warm for us to endure the fur coats made of reindeer, seal, squirrel, minkskins, etc., but most of the party are provided with them.

The hoods are usually attached to the coat and are thrown back in warm weather, leaving the head exposed.

The winter boots are made of reindeer and other warm skins, with the fur on, but are not worn in wet weather. The hair of the reindeer is as soft as beaver, and a coat of its material will keep out the cold more effectually than 10 times its weight in woolens.

In fact, as I am told by residents, one cannot wear enough woolens to keep warm in winter, the weight being too great. Furs are also a necessity for bedding.—Cor. Portland Oregonian.

The Habit of Migrating.

The best authorities state that the habit of migrating is due to the fact that at the time of the great climatic change whereby the northern portion of the globe became the frigid place it is now the birds inhabiting the extreme north were forced southward, and, further, that in the change of seasons, when in summer the north furnishes them the conditions of life they have gradually formed, the habit of resorting thither. This explanation sounds plausible, but there are some questions which it fails to answer. For instance, how do the birds forecast a change of season so that their flight southward is begun in time to escape the storms of winter? And by what messenger are they informed in the spring that the time has come when they can with safety return to their northern breeding places?

The latter question receives a hypothetical answer in the assertion that, as most migratory birds breed in the northern limit of their flight, it is the sexual instinct which sends them north—and the statement is supported by the fact that the male birds of some species usually precede the females—and as the sexual instinct is always stronger in the male there seems some reason in this theory. But not all birds are migratory.—Mrs. J. B. Southworth in Albany Journal.

The Bravery of Women.

Whether they are recognized as more than a passive force, women have played an active part in history and have shown resource in emergency, presence of mind in peril, and invincible determination in the face of seemingly hopeless obstacles.

They have not degenerated. On the contrary, with the opportunity of the present, its broad training, its liberal education, they are more ready now for active duty than ever they were.

Never before has the state had in reserve such a force of intelligent, steady nerved, well disciplined women. Whatever crisis may call it into action, this reserve is ready, and in any and every emergency it will not be found unprepared or reluctant to do its part with heart, brain and mind.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

One Man's Insane Idea.

The writer once entered into conversation with the inmate of an asylum, at the request of the superintendent, who said he was a monomaniac, and invited me to find out if he could the particular point of his insanity. "It is a rum subject to go mad on, I must say," he added, by way of helping me. I tried him on various subjects without success; in fact, he seemed better informed than myself, and I was turning to go when he tapped me on the shoulder and whispered in my ear:

"It's a long time coming, isn't it?"

"What is?" I asked.

"Why, the day of pentecost, of course!" he answered.

And that was the only irrational thing he said during the whole interview.—London Tit-Bits.

A Smart Advertisement.

As a clever advertisement the following requires beating: "An enterprising literary American has just discovered that Julius Cæsar was not assassinated for political reasons, as generally supposed, but because in the senate he passed a disparaging remark on the fitting of the toga of Michael Cassius, which evidently must have been made up by some second class tailor in Via Sartoris. This, and this only, it seems, caused the tragic fate of the mighty Julius. Suits made at the New Zealand Clothing factory fit perfectly. Mr.—, the new cutter, gives entire satisfaction. Inspection invited."

AN EXAMPLE OF IMPUDENCE.

She was a very sweet, gracious old lady; her manners were full of dignity; when she conversed with a young man it was a distinction for him; when she conversed with a girl it was an honor for that girl. When I first knew that old lady, she lived in a large house and kept a carriage; she gave rather stately dinner parties; she had rather formal receptions; she was the queen of the quarter where she lived. Everybody respected her, and all those who had the privilege of her friendship loved her. Suddenly she let her great house and gardens and removed into quite a small villa, with a little garden; also she gave up her carriage and limited her household to one servant. And she gave no more parties.

It was understood that this dear old lady had lost her fortune. But nobody knew the facts, nor could anybody ask. She retired to this little villa and continued to have receptions, at which tea and homemade cake were the only luxuries offered. Also, there arrived at this juncture a niece, of whose existence no one had previously been aware. She was not nice, this lady; it is no fault to be no longer young or good looking, but one ought at least to be well bred and good tempered.

Now, after a year or two, during which the bitter tongue and the bad temper of the niece caused continual misery to the old lady, there came a time of sickness. It was the plague of influenza. Many of us in the quarter had it very badly, among others the old lady's niece. For the old lady's sake, not from any love of our own, we were shocked to learn that the niece was dead.

A month or two afterward the old lady told me a story. She said: "You know that I lost all my money. It was lost for me. It was my man of business who stole it. He forged a power of attorney and sold my stocks; he gambled with the proceeds and lost the whole. When there was no more, he confessed the robbery. But, he said, to prove the esteem in which he held me, he had brought his only child with him, and he would leave her with me until better days. So he kissed my hand and left me, and that," she explained, "is the reason why I had to leave my dear old house and to receive this poor creature whose unfortunate manners and bitter tongue made me miserable all day long. I have often thought"— Here she stopped, and thinking of that sublime and unequaled impudence I, too, have often thought.—New York Recorder.

The Cowboy's Marvelous Memory.

"Of all men in the world not accounted prodigies I think the cowboy's memory and intuition are the most marvelous," said E. H. Cunningham of Indian Territory at the Laclede. "I have witnessed feats of memory performed by cowboys that appear preposterous when related. For instance, I was on a drive from the Texas Panhandle to the territory a few weeks ago with 7,000 cattle. Twelve men comprised my outfit. We had a couple of big stampedes, and after we got the frightened cattle rounded up, how do you suppose we were able to tell how many were missing? You naturally think we went through the laborious task of cutting out and counting them, and that's where you are mistaken.

"Every one of my 12 men was so thoroughly acquainted with the herd that either of them could, by getting on an elevation so as to get a clear sweep of the entire herd, tell exactly how many and the kind of stock we had missed in the roundup. Not only that, but he could pick out all the stray cattle that had got mixed in our bunch without seeing the brand. It is a marvelous accomplishment, and one that is attained only after long service in the 'bull punching' business."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Impressing a Lesson.

During my second year at the Jefferson Medical college, Philadelphia, I had a classmate whom it would not be uncharitable to call a dullard. One of the professors was in the habit of taking the boys unawares and quizzing them. He said to this fellow one day:

"How much is a dose of ——?" giving the technical name of croton oil.

"A teaspoonful," was the ready reply.

The professor made no comment, and the fellow soon realized that he had made a mistake. After a quarter of an hour he said:

"Professor, I want to change my answer to that question."

"Is's too late, Mr. ——," responded the professor, looking at his watch. "Your patient's been dead 14 minutes."—Cor. New York World.

Killing Time at Night.

"I consider the Vaudeville club a great success," said a man of society languidly, "because it fills a large felt want. What to do between 11 and 1 has always been a question with me. I leave the house where I am dining at 11 or thereabouts and try to look in at any ball or dance that is going about 1, but the intermediate space has always been difficult to fill up." "I should go to bed," said his country cousin simply.—New York Tribune.

A DOMESTIC HERO.

A Business Man Who Has Devoted Himself to Making a Woman Happy.

I came across a hero the other day. He looked much the same as everyday mankind. He did not know he was a hero, nor did I until he had left the party in which I met him. Domestic heroism, that of the privacy of home, with no Victoria cross or congressional medal dangling before it as a possibility, is, after all, perhaps the noblest of all heroism. Here was a great, strong, healthy and wealthy man, fond of outdoor sports, of travel, of the activity of a busy commercial career—one who in his youth was a man's man rather than a woman's. Fifteen years ago he married, and in a few years there came three children into the household.

It had been a happy family. He has been a kindly husband as husbands go, and she a pleasant and dutiful wife. Out of the night came paralysis to her—a new life to him. Since that time his career has been entirely altered. His business was quickly arranged so he could be frequently absent from his office. He was father, mother, nurse, teacher, companion and playmate compressed in one domestic providence. Never had woman more devoted attendant nor more faithful and intelligent nurse.

All the little questions of housekeeping and of the care and training of children, of their clothing, their pleasures and their pains, fell to him, and in his hands they have been managed with a wisdom and care absolutely wonderful. This has been, remember, something of 10 years' standing, and it has grown instead of lessening. Outside of his comparatively casual attention to business his horizon is confined to the walls of his home. To make the wife forget her burden of affliction and be a happy woman through it all has been his happiness, and with such a spirit he could not fail.

They travel about considerably, this family, and all the details are taken care of by him. No hired nurses or governesses are permitted to usurp any of his duties, although there is one of each there at hand as his representative in times of enforced absence. So skillfully is all this done, so modestly is it carried out, that even the chief beneficiary does not realize what is occurring—and that is his reward. "They do not build Westminster abbeys nowadays," said a friend of mine once, and I thought of his remark when I heard the story of this man, for the supply of heroes at this time is far below the demand.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Taste In Animals.

Many experiments have been made in order to find out what and where the organ of taste is in the lower creations; but it is easier to say where it is not. Crayfish and worms seem to have very decided preferences in the matter of food, though no special taste organ has been found. Lobsters like decaying food; the crab is more dainty in its diet.

Snails and slugs show a decided preference for certain kinds of food, as garden lovers know to their cost; peas and cabbages, dahlias and sunflowers are great favorites, but they will not touch the white mustard. Some prefer animal food, especially if rather high. Spiders have only a slight sense of taste; flies soaked in paraffin seem quite palatable to them, though one species, the diadema, is somewhat more particular and refuses to touch alcohol in any form whatever.—Chambers' Journal.

Children Must Sleep.

There is nothing that little folks need so much or that helps their physical development so largely as plenty of sleep. Until they are 15 years old they should have at least 10 hours of nature's great restorer. An authority on such matters says that they never should be awakened, but allowed to sleep until of their own accord they are ready to get up. School and household duties, however, make such a course impracticable, but if they are put to bed early enough they will be quite ready to rise without calling at a reasonable hour. Bedtime can be made pleasant by the telling of a story or a few especially loving ministrations and caresses that will make this hour a period to be anticipated rather than dreaded.—St. Louis Republic.

Finding Their Way Home.

Who does not know that a cat, or even a half grown kitten, taken a long way from home in a bag, nearly always finds its way back? When living in northern Michigan, I had a cat we tired of. I took her in a boat directly across the lake, about two miles, and turned her loose. Although it was about six miles around the end of the lake, a circuitous course and certainly unknown to her by sight, the next morning she was back at the old place. Another case is that of a cat that was taken by rail fully 20 miles in southwest Missouri, and the next day he walked in all right at his former home.—Cor. Science.

A New Kind.

"What's that picture with the curtain over it?" asked Mrs. Hicks in the art gallery.

"I don't know. It must be one of those shade overs they talk so much about," said Hicks.—Harper's Bazar.

SANTA ROSA NOTES.

Its Defunct Shoe Factory—The Water Question.

ED. INDEX-TRIBUNE:

It has been some time since I have had the pleasure of perusing county seat items in your columns, or neither do I more enjoy the scintillations from the sparkling pen of "McGinty." What has he to say for his long continued silence? Has he betaken himself high up on Sonoma mountain, like unto Rip Van Winkle, for a nap of some score years.

Speaking of Rip VanWinkle, A. P. Burbank did most admirably render a selection from that play at the Athenæum, last week while appearing with the "only Bill Nye" Mr. Burbank was a fine elocutionist, but he wasn't in it alongside of the aforesaid Bill. Bill's remarks concerning his "upright ranch in North Carolina" were really amusing. A large number of the audience—he had a full house—really laughed. Bill came and left; and with him left five hundred dollars.

Another man came and stayed two months; did ten times as much talking as Mr. Nye. He left too. But with him nary a shekel. He talked shoe factory; talked it early and late. With his palaver he induced a company of our citizens to agree to take his plant at Oakland—nearly old enough to vote—off his hands at par value. That was all right; but when he wanted them to run the institution in Oakland for his benefit, alas, that was too much. The last straw had broken the camel's back. The company is a thing of the past. Mr. Wentworth's face is no longer seen on our streets.

The present City Council evidently mean business in regard to a more efficient water supply. At their last meeting an ordinance was introduced to submit to the people on May 9th the question of voting $200,000 in bonds to purchase, maintain and operate a system adequate to the needs of the city and wholesome in quality. The proposition to be submitted is a very broad measure, admitting of the purchase of the present system, or the construction of any system, either pumping or gravity. One of our daily papers deems this matter of such vital importance that it devotes columns each issue to verbose correspondence in preference to current local news. Perhaps some like it but it gets rather monotonous.

From the number of familar faces we noticed on the streets this week we thought Sonoma must have been depopulated. Inquiry revealed the fact that they were dancing attendance to the cause of Justice.

Easter was observed by special services in nearly all the churches. At 2 P. M. on that day the Knight's Templar also held public services in the Athenæum. Ukiah and Petaluma commandries were present and participated in the ceremonies.

Everybody is growling about dull times, merchants especially, but business in every line is on the increase.

The construction of the new street railway lines in this city begins to give the town a rather metropolitan appearance. More anon.

The Adelphic Literary Society.

The following programme was rendered by the Adelphic Literary Society at the High School yesterday afternoon: Response to roll call, Quotations from J. R. Lowell; biographical essay, Lowell, Carrol Prunty; song, "Help it On," Society; essay, "Siberian Exiles," Chas. Lowell; reading, "Playing the Fool," Stella Johnson; song, "America," Society; reading, "The Woman's Pocket," Harvey Perkins; song, "Student's Lay," Society; recitation, "Bay Billy," Bertha Campbell. Debate, Resolved, "That the State Capitol should not be moved from Sacramento to San Jose." Affirmative, Bessie Knight, Mabel Lowell, Chas. Champlin. Negative, Florence Thompson, Stella Johnson, Lizzie Harper. The debate was decided in favor of the affirmative.

What a Pity

that so many otherwise attractive, polite and particular people afflict their friends by the foul and disagreeable odor of their breath; it is mainly caused by disordered digestion, and can be corrected by removing the cause, by using that pure medicine, Sulphur Bitters.—Health Magazine.

THE STATE CAPITAL.

An Episode of the Early History of California.

Now that the removal of the State Capital from Sacramento to San Jose is to be voted upon at the next general election, the following concise history of how Sacramento became the capital of the State will no doubt prove interesting reading. It is given by the San Jose Mercury:

San Jose was the first Capital of California. It was made so by the Constitutional Convention which met at Monterey in 1849, and which provided in the Constitution that the Legislature should meet in San Jose until removed by law, the consent of two-thirds of all the members of both Houses being necessary for its removal.

It was this avoidance of their duty to fix permanently the State Capital which caused the removal of it from San Jose and gave the State of California that discreditable chapter of its history which details the shifting about of the seat of government for sevaral years.

As soon as the first Legislature convened in San Jose, in December, 1849, the effort for the removal of the Capital began. It is a singular fact that the first bill introduced in that Legislature for its removal from San Jose was framed and presented by Assemblyman Geo. B. Tingley, from Sacramento. It failed of passage through that session, but in the interim before the second session plots and counter plots were rife to rob San Jose of her birthright. Vallejo wanted the Capital; so did Sacramento and Monterey. The first two of these places were especially and extravagantly active in bidding for the prize.

By the time the second Legislature convened it become apparant that if gilded temptation could accomplish it San Jose would lose the Capital. Sacramento offered a million dollars worth of public buildings, but Vallejo outbid her in both the form and amount of her offer. General Vallejo came to San Jose with deeds to unlimited quantities of land for the State, and with conveyances of specific lots of various sizes for the legislators. The temptation was too alluring. The Legislature fell down, and on February 14th, 1852, the act was passed removing the State Capital to Vallejo

When the next Legislature attempted to meet at Vallejo it found what a mistake had been made.

None of the brilliant promises of Vallejo had been fulfilled. The Legislature in despair adjourned to Sacramento to finish its session. The fourth Legislature again attempted to meet at Vallejo, but still found facilities inadequate, and was induced to move to Benicia and made that place "the permanent seat of the Government." It remained so just a year, when the fifth Legislature shifted the seat again to Sacramento.

By this time the "seat of Government" had become threadbare. When the Legislature passed a law requiring the Supreme Court "to hold its sessions at the Capital of the State," all eyes were turned to that tribunal to see where it would go. On March 27th, 1854, the majority of the Justices of the Supreme Court decided that San Jose was the legal Capital of the State, and that all the previous attempts to locate the seat of Government elsewhere had been illegal. Justices Heydenfeldt and Wells concurred in this opinion, but Justice Murray dissented. The Court accordingly moved to San Jose, and a suit was begun before the District Court of the Third Judicial District to compel the rest of the State officers to come to San Jose. Judge Hester decided in favor of the removal, but the case was appealed to the Supreme Court.

In the meantime, by a sad misfortune, Justice Wells died. Governor Bigler saw his opportunity to serve Sacramento and keep the Capital from San Jose. He appointed Justice Bryant to the vacancy on the Supreme Bench, caused by the death of Wells, with the understanding, it was claimed, that his opinion as to the legal seat of Government was in harmony with that of Justice Murray. The result justified this suspicion, for when the matter came before the Supreme Court on appeal it reversed itself, and held that Sacramento was the State Capital. So San Jose lost again its birthright, when it seemed within her grasp, and that by an accident of politics or worse.

Go to the Sonoma House for a good meal. *

A WILL CONTEST.

Some Very Serious Allegations Against a Petaluma Women.

On March 21st the will of the late C. P. Hatch of Petaluma was filed for probate at the County Clerk's office. Said instrument names his wife, Lucreta A. Hatch, as his executrix, and the estate is valued at about $20,000.

The will provided that all of the property, except $1000 and a certain piece of San Francisco property, should go to his wife. The property and cash excepted to go to Mr. Hatch's neices in equal shares.

Friday, Lippett & Lippett, attorneys for John Hatch, a brother of the late C. P. Hatch, filed papers in a contest of the will at the County Clerk's office, which will have a very sensational effect. After setting forth the fact of the death of C. P. Hatch and the further fact that a will was made as above quoted, the complaint alleges that the instrument was not the last will and testament of Mr. Hatch; that the witness did not sign the will and testament and that said instrument was signed by Mr. Hatch while under the undue influence of one so-called Lucretia A. Hatch, whose true name is Darrow, with whom he has been living and while Hatch was in a feeble and infirm condition. The complaint also alleges that Mrs Hatch, or Darrow, has children by her husband, Darrow.

It is claimed that Mrs. Darrow never had a divorce from her first husband, that she went to Petaluma under the name of Hathaway and before wedding Hatch took the maiden name of Newton. And so it is said the will is to be contested on the ground of bigamy.—Santa Rosa Republican.

Preventing Future Misery.

If there is, in this vale of tears, a more prolific source of misery than the rheumatic twinge, we have yet to hear of it. People are born with a tendency to rheumatism, just as they are with one to consumption or to scrofula. Slight causes may develop this. As soon as the sympathetic joint manifests itself, recourse should be had to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which checks it for the present and by its thorough alterative action expels the rheumatic poison from the system. This statement tallies exactly with the testimony of physicians who have employed this blood depurent in their private practice. There is also the amplest personal and general testimony as to the efficacy of the Bitters for malaria, liver complaint, constipation, indigestion, kidney trouble, nervousness and loss of appetite and flesh. After a wetting, whether followed by a cold or not, the Bitters is useful as a preventive of the initial attack of rheumatism.

I Would Be Dead

But For Hood's Sarsaparilla

A Wonderful Cure—Restored to Good Health

"Last winter I was in a very bad condition, my general health all run down. I grew thin, had no appetite, could not sleep more than five minutes at a time, and when I woke up I would have pains in my bowels. In the morning when I arose I would seem more tired than when I went to bed. I had a thumping sensation in the region of my heart. I cannot tell

How Miserable I Felt.

I was obliged to give up work entirely. My friends advised me to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and I did so. I am now using the sixth bottle, and can say that it has worked upon me a wonderful cure. I have grown quite strong, am again able to work, sleep well and have a good appetite, with no more

Palpitation of the Heart.

I am happier now and in better health than I have been for years. I firmly believe that if it had not been for Hood's Sarsaparilla I would be dead to-day. It may not be worth mentioning, but before taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I had paid two physicians sixty dollars for medicine, and Hood's Sarsaparilla gave me a new lease of life for five." W. Chicago's Population.

There is probably no city of importance in the world that can show such rapid and wonderful growth as Chicago since its destruction by fire. To-day its population is about 1,200 000. Mr. Peter Van Schaack, one of the leading merchants of that city said in conversation, that a large number of his personal friends, as well as scores of representative men throughout the Northwest with whom he had conversed upon the subject, had found St. Jacobs Oil a pain-curing and healing remedy of the most extraordinary efficacy. It is the Great Remedy for Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Backache, Bruises, Burns, Swellings etc.

HEART DISEASE 30 YEARS.

GRAND ISLAND, NEB., April 8th, 1892.

Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

GENTLEMEN: I had been troubled with HEART DISEASE FOR THE LAST 30 YEARS, and although I was treated by able physicians and tried many remedies, I grew steadily worse until I WAS COMPLETELY PROSTRATED AND CONFINED TO MY BED WITHOUT ANY HOPE OF RECOVERY. I would have very bad sinking spells, when my pulse would stop beating altogether, and it was with the greatest difficulty that my circulation could be started, which would bring me back to consciousness again. While in this condition I tried your NEW HEART CURE, and began to improve from the first, and now I am able to do a good day's work for a man 68 years of age. I give DR. MILES' NEW HEART CURE all the credit for my recovery. It is over six months since I have taken any, although I keep a bottle in the house in case I should need it. I have also used your NERVE AND LIVER PILLS, and think a great deal of them. Z. AVERY.

Edward Lord of Embarcadero has filed a demurrer in the Superior Court in the suit of P. H. Thompson, Road Commissioner, to compel him (Lord) to remove an obstruction across a road near Green's Landing which the complainant claims to be a public highway but which the respondant avers is private property.

The attention of the children of our readers is called to the advertisement of "Candy" which appears in another column. The City Bakery on the East side of the Plaza has just received a fresh supply of all kinds of fresh candies, which are being sold cheap. Geo. Gilbert, the polite young employee in the bakery, will wait upon you.

Pietro Ubaldi, one of the three Italians engaged in the cutting affray in this place on last Christmas night, has been convicted of simple assault. He will receive his sentence next Monday. Ubaldi got off much easier than the other two men engaged in the bloody affray, who were found guilty of assault with a deadly weapon, and will have to pay the penalty of their crime by a term in the State Prison.

Trout fishing in Sonoma Creek and its tributaries is reported to be better this season than for many years. A local sportsman one afternoon this week caught over twenty of the finny tribe that weighed from a half to a pound and a half each. He also succeeded in hooking a number of small fry between six and eight inches in length. It is easy enough to catch trout if you only know how to do it.

The Sonoma House is the house for commercial travelers. C. F. Rodin, proprietor. *

End of the Italian Cutting Scrape Cases.

The Italian cutting scrape cases came to an end in the Superior Court at Santa Rosa last Wednesday by the conviction of F. Clerite on a second charge of assault with a deadly weapon. In all there were four charges growing out of the affray in which three men were cut—two against Clerite and one each against Ubaldi and Galli. From the testimony it was shown that Clerite first cut the two latter and then made his escape out of a rear door of the Garibaldi House where the difficulty occurred. After being wounded Ubaldi and Galli attacked an innocent onlooker named Perasso whom they evidentaly mistook for their assailant, and he was slashed across the face twice, presumably by Galli. District Attorney Seawell succeeded in securing a conviction on every charge, Galli and Clerite being found guilty of assault with a deadly weapon and Ubaldi of simple assault. The men will be sentenced by Judge Dougherty next Monday.

A Treat for the Sonoma Public.

The phonographic and musical entertainment to be given at Union Hall on Saturday evening, April 15th, promises to be a rare treat for the people of Sonoma. The entertainment will be held under the auspices of the Columbia Athletic Club of this city. Mr. C. Nestor of the Pacific Phonograph Company of San Francisco, and a friend of S. Schocken and other members of the club, has kindly offered one of his largest talking machines for the use of the club on the occasion of this its first entertainment, and will be present in person. This phonograph will give selections from Patti and other world-renowned singers; also musical selections from the celebrated Marine Band of Washington and the Park Band of San Francisco. Speeches and recitations by famous orators will also be given. It is said that this machine, which is one of Edison's best, will give these renditions so true to life that they are actually startling. In addition to the above there will be vocal and instrumental music by local talent. After the entertainment there will be dancing until 12 o'clock, excellent music having been engaged for the evening.

A Fine Monument.

Wm. Trudgen of this city has just completed for Mrs. Goodwin, the widow of the late Benj. Goodwin, one of the finest monuments in Mountain Cemetery. The shaft, which is of white Italian marble, is eight feet in height and is mounted on a solid granite base. The design is both beautiful and artistic. The monument is erected in the center of a plot about twenty feet square enclosed by a solid wall of Sonoma Valley white building stone, which will endure for ages. This is only one of several burial plots that have been leveled and enclosed and monuments erected thereon by Mr. Trudgen within the past few months, and all are a credit to his workmanship and skill as a mechanic. It is said that Mrs. Goodwin saved several hundred dollars by having her work done by a home mechanic.

Poisoned.

The family of D. Valenti, residing on Spain street, were poisoned last Saturday after partaking freely of mushrooms, which in all probability were mixed with toadstools. The services of a physician were required to save their lives. People should not be too careful in gathering this fungus, as there are species of toadstool growing in this valley that very much resemble the mushroom. A sure test of discovering a toadstool among mushrooms is to put a silver spoon in the sauce pan while cooking and if the spoon turns black it is an invariable sign of the presence of poison and the mushrooms should be thrown away.

Narrow Escape from Drowning.

The little one-year-old boy of P. Bacala, living on First-street West, fell into a culvert which crosses the railway track near the tank house of the Donahue Company, one day last week. There was two or three feet of stagnant water in the same and but for the timely arrival of assistance the little fellow would have been drowned. When discovered he was immersed in the water over his eyes with a younger brother holding him by the hair of the head and yelling lustily for help. When taken out he was filled with water and almost gone.

Mr. Byce, the pleasant manager of the Petaluma Incubator Company, informed an INDEX-TRIBUNE reporter that he had shipped last Monday 87 incubators and brooders to different parts of the state. Any of our farmers who wish to raise chickens or ducks should not fail to try one of the above incubators, as they beat anything in the world for hatching chickens.

By the use of a softly folded girdle a basque may be easily remodled into a fashionable corsage. Cut the basque off round at the waist line and finish in the usual way. For the girdle take a bias strip of velvet, soft silk, or dress material, seven inches wide and long enough to reach around the waist and hook. Gather or plait this at the ends to bring it into four inches, bind and finish with hooks and eyes. In front tack the folds tightly to a whale-bone placed across inside.

Mrs. Phœbe Hearst has definitely decided to erect a museum in Golden Gate Park at an expense of $1,000,000. Much of the material has been gathered by Mrs. Hearst during extensive travels, and is now stored in her Washington and San Francisco residences and in warehouses in New York. One of the San Francisco papers is authority for the statement that in her will Mrs. Hearst has made a bequest of another million for the museum, one half to be used for the building and the remaining $500,000 to be reserved as a fund for its maintenance.

A SENSATION IN CHURCH.

An Inquisitive Dog Created Consternation In a Puritan Gathering.

"Some curious stories are told in connection with old Puritan church customs," said Mr. Hezekiah Butterworth. "Some of the old customs seem very funny as we see them now. "It was little less than a crime not to attend church in those old days unless detained by sickness. In fact, a person was thought very little of who even came late to Sunday worship.

"One Sunday morning in early autumn a Puritan woman, whose reputation for housekeeping, spinning and church attendance was excellent, was belated in her morning work. She took her long necked pitcher and went to the pasture where her cow was waiting to be milked. This duty done, she found —for she could see people on the road—that she hadn't time even to carry the milk back to the house and get to church in season. So she took her long necked pitcher along with her and sat in the gallery right near where the singers and bass viols were displayed. After the singing was over and the long sermon had begun—sermons were an hour or two long in those days—she grew sleepy.

"Her long necked pitcher sat on the floor near by and near the front of the gallery. She was soon oblivious of either milk, sermon or a dog that came pitpatering up the gallery stairs. The milk soon attracted the dog. He smelled and wagged his tail, then smelled and wagged again, then looked inquiringly at the unconscious milkmaid. He made up his mind very soon, and into the long neck went the dog's head, neck too. He couldn't get much milk and wanted to pull back and try again.

"But he couldn't. His head was wedged fast in. He pulled and used his paws and tried to back away. Blinded of course by the pitcher, his steps were erratic, and suddenly to the astonished people below there appeared a sudden parting of the balcony curtain, an almost blood curdling yell was heard, and there was a flash and downpouring, straight in among the four unconscious deacons in the deacons' pew beneath, of snow white milk, long necked pitcher and a milk soaked, frightened dog.

"For once there was a great awakening in that church, but the poor woman was frightened nearly out of her wits, and the superstitious deacons were greatly scandalized."—Boston Journal.

Attention Paid to Walking.

It is enough to imagine the unfeigned amazement of a dame of the old school if the proper position of the feet in walking were made a matter of doubt. For years the dancing master's standard in all matters of carriage and walk has been an unquestioned one. The fin de siecle young woman, however, has a mind of her own. She has not found that the conventional training of the dancing master, valuable as it undoubtedly is, was all sufficient in producing that grace of carriage and elegance of manner so desirable in the woman of the world.

On the contrary, she has found that the physical training of the woman of the stage has been more often conducive to the desired end. Hence it is that schools of Delsarte have sprung up all over the land, and systems of physical training, including boxing and fencing, heretofore relegated to the sterner sex, have found patronesses in plenty.—Chicago Tribune.

He Matches Odd Buttons.

Not long since I discovered a man in New York who makes a specialty of matching lost buttons. His shop, a dingy little, low ceilinged room, was surrounded by shelves, on which were piled boxes of buttons of all sorts and conditions. While I was there a girl came in and asked him if he had any like those on her jacket. He took down several specimens and presently found one, which he sewed on. She paid him 10 cents. That is the usual price, though rare buttons sometimes come higher.

At regular intervals he goes around collecting buttons among tailors and dressmakers, who save them for him and sell them very cheap. He has a set of regular customers, and they rarely go away without finding exactly what they want.—Lippincott's.

Some Other Man.

"Hello, Joe!" cried a youth on Broadway yesterday as he slapped a gentleman vigorously between the shoulders.

"Oh, I beg a thousand pardons!" he continued as in response to the blow the other turned his head and revealed an unfamiliar face.

"Took you for another man, you know," he added by way of an apology.

"And so I am another man," replied the stranger laconically as with a shrug of the shoulders he struck across the street, leaving the young man to wonder how he should have framed a more effectual apology.—New York Herald.

A Pagoda in China.

The porcelain pagoda in China had nine stories of the combined height of 266 feet, and the pinnacle was 148 feet above the highest story. It derived its name from being covered with plates of porcelain. It cost 2,485,484 ounces of silver.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

How It Feels to Lead a Procession.

"If you want to experience a novel sensation," said a gentleman who sports a colonel's uniform as member of a governor's staff whenever said governor turns out on parade, "just get on horseback and take part in some great procession like those which marked the Columbian festivities.

"It is the most curious feeling that you ever experienced, I will wager a hat. It beats hashheesh or opium smoking all to pieces. It is unlike any other thing that you ever saw or heard or felt.

"At first you are all right, and you hear the bands and see the great furrows of humanity on either side of the way as distinctly as you ever saw anything in your life. But after awhile things begin to grow blurred to your senses. The music dies away and there is nothing but a dull roar in your ears, while the crowd becomes merely a dull and indistinct mass without form or meaning in your eyes.

"But now you begin to see single figures—men hanging from the eaves of high buildings, boys perched on chimneys or signboards or in some hazardous place. You watch one of them with fascinated eyes, expecting every minute to see him fall and be dashed to pieces on the pavement. You are constantly filled with an overwhelming feeling that you are to be witness to some dreadful accident, but for the life of you you cannot turn your eyes away from it. After awhile you cease to be a human being at all and become a mere automaton. You are not controlled by human emotions, but by the magnetism of the crowd. It is some such sort of hypnotic state, I apprehend, which men get into during a battle and which makes them so unlike themselves."—New York Herald.

The Spider Hawk.

The miners of Colorado who have built cabins on the mountain sides know what a pest the small brown wood spider proves to be. They thrown their webs over our best clothes, cooking utensils, in every corner, where you can get them in your eyes and mouth. Not only that, but they will drop into the frying pan, water bucket or upon the table where you are eating. Nature has furnished a remedy and a friend when she gave the spider hawk. The name is given by miners to a small, steel blue wasp almost three-fourths of an inch in length. He can easily be recognized by the quick, nervous strokes of his wings. They build a nest up among the rafters of your cabin of wood pulp or furze from the outer coating of old dead trees. Then they are ready for business.

Every few minutes you can see your hawk climb up the rafters with a spider, sometimes carrying one four or five times his own weight. Some times they get a spider so heavy that they will fall many times before they succeed in reaching their nest. They never give up, but keep on trying until they succeed. When the spider is safely placed in the nest the female hawk deposits her egg in the dead body. The hawks live only in pairs, as far as my observation goes. They become rather tame and seem to be obliged to you for building the spider trap for their benefit.—Great Divide.

Grant Allen on Literary Rewards.

Grant Allen's experience and advice may be of service to other aspirants who may fondly imagine that the successful literary man treads a primrose highway to fame and fortune. "If anybody thinks," he says, "that my upward path from obscurity to a very modest modicum of popularity and success was a smooth and easy one he is immensely mistaken. I had a ten years' hard struggle for bread, into the details of which I don't care to enter. It left me broken in health and spirit, with all the vitality and vivacity crushed out of me. I suppose the object of this series of papers is to warn off ingenuous and aspiring youth from the hardest worked and worst paid of the professions. If so I would say earnestly to the ingenuous and aspiring: 'Brain for brain, in no market can you sell your abilities to such poor advantage. Don't take to literature if you've capital enough to buy a good broom and energy enough to annex a vacant crossing.'"

"German Syrup"

Martinsville, N.J., Methodist Parsonage. "My acquaintance with your remedy, Boschee's German Syrup, was made about fourteen years ago, when I contracted a Cold which resulted in a Hoarseness and a Cough which disabled me from filling my pulpit for a number of Sabbaths. After trying a Physician, without obtaining relief—I cannot say now what remedy he prescribed —I saw the advertisement of your remedy and obtained a bottle. I received such quick and permanent help from it that whenever we have had Throat or Bronchial troubles since in our family, Boschee's German Syrup has been our favorite remedy and always with favorable results. I have never hesitated to report my experience of its use to others when I have found them troubled in like manner." REV. W. H. HAGGARTY, of the Newark, New Jersey, M.E. Conference, April 25, '90.

ALAMEDA, COL., Jan., 93. XII

My wife was troubled with nervousness about one year before she took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, and at that time had very severe attacks of spasm, convulsion, and pains in different parts of the body; when in this state her lower jaws would set violently and set sometimes, bite her tongue, breathe heavily, then short, then seemed to stop entirely, get a wild look in her eyes and rolling around, then stop sometimes; it would take two men to hold her in bed, otherwise her body would cramp and be so for two hours. She took but two bottles of the Nerve Tonic, which cured her entirely of all these torments, which myself and wife gladly testify it truly had the desired effect. D. S. M'GILLIS.

Mrs. Ester Davilbiss, 354 S. Tenth street, San Jose, Cal., writes, October 1893: Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic has indeed done wonders in my part of the country. There has been bought in my neighborhood over $75 worth.

Dear Sirs:—I have used your KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE for the last twelve years never being without it but a few weeks in that time and I have made several wonderful cures with it. I cured a Curb of long standing. Then I had a four year old colt badly Sweenied; tried every thing without any benefit, so I tried your liniment, and in a few weeks he was well and his shoulder filled up all right, and the other, a four year old that had a Thoroughpin and Blood Spavin on the same joint, and to-day no one can tell which leg it was on. These statements can be proven, if necessary; the four year olds are now seven and can be seen any day at Cottage Grove, Or. S. Z. PAXTON.

HIGH SCHOOL CABINET.

To all Those Interested in Education.

The Sonoma Valley Union High School has an all-sorts cabinet started and small donations toward the same will be greatly appreciated by all members of the High School. Remember that anything, no matter how small, in the way of zoological, botonical or mineralogical specimens will be gladly received and will help wonderfully in our practical work.

A. C. ABSHIRE,
Principal High School.
